Description:

From Library Journal Erin Russell is a pilot with a strong track record and a great chance for advancement within her field. Then her friend and mentor, Mick Hammon, is killed in a plane crash that claims 151 lives. The crash cripples Erin emotionally to the point that she can no longer fly. Adding to her distress is the fact that the crash remains under investigation. Erin is certain that Mick, a pilot with a flawless record, was not to blame. Believing that the National Transportation Safety Board will use Mick as a convenient scapegoat unless she can prove otherwise, Erin agrees to help investigator Addison Lowe find the truth. As the two investigate, they fall in love and also rediscover their belief in God. Two dynamic leads give life to this solid if unspectacular romance from the prolific Blackstock (Blind Trust: Second Chances, Book 3, LJ Copyright 1998 Reed Business Information, Inc.

From the Publisher In this fourth and final Second Chances book, an investigation into an airline disaster becomes a tangled web of love, mercy, and honor torn between two impossible choices.
